
Bearing to Know

The State of our World

A Noble Virtue

We honour ANZAC day
We remember the wartime dead not only because of their courage but because we long to believe that we would do the same Fight selflessly for our children to willingly sacrifice whatever it takes

The climate is changing so fast, too fast for us to adapt This strange new enemy is of our very own making

Who will we allow to call us to arms?
When will our heroism begin?
How far do things need to go before we finally acknowledge that it will take all of us pulling with all our might

When will sacrifice once again become the noblest of virtues?

Jane O'Shea

wordremedies.com